TULARE, Nov. 27.—Last night a freight train going north collided with another freight train going south at this place. The train from Lathrop was about five minutes ahead of time, and as the south train was switching—had not got on the side track—the north train ran into them. It was almost impossible to see anything for the fog. The trains were within 50 yards of each other before the headlights could be seen. They could not stop in time to prevent a collision. Both locomotives are badly injured, and two loaded box cars totally destroyed. No one hurt.

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 27.—The bridge over New river on the Anaheim Branch of the Southern Pacific Railroad has been completed. Track-laying on the eastside of the river will be commenced on Monday. The road will be finished to Anaheim in a few weeks.

A Cowardly Murder.

GEORGETOWN, Nov. 26.—On the morning of the 11th inst. Mat. Barker, Joseph Francis and another man left Georgetown for Tunnel Hill, Barker driving a four-horse team, hauling provisions to that place for Francis. At a wayside groghop they became slightly intoxicated and angry words passed. Barker became incensed at Francis' just indignation and hit him over the head with a large navy revolver, knocking him off the wagon. Francis being a small man and no match for Barker, could only remonstrate with him, and told him if he was armed things would wear a different aspect. Barker told him to "heel" himself. Francis reached his house ahead of Barker, and armed himself with a Henry rifle. When Barker drove up he fired at Francis, who stood in the doorway of the house. The latter fired twice. The first ball entered Barker's mouth and came out under his jaw near the butt of his ear; the other ball entered the side and came out near the shin. He begged Francis not to kill him. Francis immediately procured assistance for the wounded man and gave himself up to an officer. An examination was had before a justice, who acquitted him. Barker's wounds from the first were not considered dangerous. To-day, Francis, unarmed, proceeded to the house of Barker to see if the difficulty could not be settled amicably and if he could not make amends for injuries sustained by Barker. As he entered the house, Barker, with a navy revolver, blew out Francis' brains. Francis was ditch agent in employ of the California Water Co., and was highly respected. Intense excitement prevails, and lynching is talked of.

GEORGETOWN, Nov. 27.—Sheriff Brown arrived last night and arrested M. C. Barker, the murderer of Jos. Francis. The Coroner's jury to-day rentered a verdict in accordance with the facts of the case telegraphed yesterday.

The Colonist of the 22d says: The Onward had not reached Yale at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon. The cold has been very severe and it was feared that the river was blocked in places with ice. Snow fell two feet deep at Matsqui yesterday. The steamer Enterprise, awaiting the arrival of the Onward from above, did not leave New Westminster yesterday.

One night last week six Indians entered the "Bridge Tavern" in the northwestern suburbs of Victoria. One of them took up an ax [illegible] in the barroom, another drew a scalping-knife, and they kept guard over "mine host" while their pals laid in a supply of fire-water, with which the party marched off without any further demonstrations of violence. The red man is getting thirsty under the more stringent and effective operations of the Federal law, which came into operation in the Province a few weeks ago.

An O[illegible] says: The vestry of the Reformed Episcopal Church in this city have received the following important telegram: "Victoria, British Columbia, Nov. 1, 1874.—Reformed Episcopal Church [illegible] organized here with three hundred and fifty members. The Very Reverend Dean Cridge takes charge of the new congregation. Send four hundred copies of the revised Book of Common Prayer, a book for reading desk, and Bishop Cummins' license to the Dean to officiate as a minister of the Reformed Episcopal Church."

The jury in the Washington safe burglary case have failed to agree and have been discharged. This trial originated in the robbery of a safe in the office of the District Attorney at Washington while the District investigation was pending. The theory of the prosecution was that the burglars expected to find certain documents of importance bearing on the affairs of the Ring. Of course, there were interested parties behind the thieves. Colonel Whitley, Chief of the Secret Service Bureau, A. B. Williams and D. W. Harrington were arrested for conspiracy, and Hayes, Benton and others for burglary. On the trial of the three former, Hayes, one of the burglars, turned State's evidence, and it was on his testimony that the case turned. He swore, among other interesting things, that he was promised the wardenship of the New Jersey penitentiary. Indeed, a ring of New Jersey politicians seem to have managed the affair.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE OREGONIAN:

Well sustained report hath it that the State Treasurer contemplates disregarding the usage and law and refusing to pay warrants upon the Treasury in the order of their presentation and endorsement by the Treasurer. This has heretofore been the custom as it clearly has been and is the law. The provision of the Code enumerating the duties of the Treasurer is as follows:

> "To pay all warrants drawn on the Treasurer in the order which they are presented, out of the appropriate fund; if there are no such funds in the Treasury then he shall endorse on such warrants 'Not paid for want of funds,' together with the date; and all warrants so endorsed shall draw legal interest from and after such endorsement."

The law provides that the Secretary of State shall draw his warrant in payment of a claim against the State only in case the Legislature has made an appropriation for the same. The Legislature of 1872 enacted "That the following sums be, and the same are hereby, specifically appropriated and set aside for the several objects hereinafter mentioned." It was against these appropriations the Secretary's warrants were drawn. There being no money then in the treasury, they were endorsed as above provided.

The late Legislature enacted another appropriation law, similar to the above, with this added clause, not in the one of 1872.

> "SECTION 19. No money shall be paid out under this act except upon warrants drawn by the Secretary of State upon the State Treasurer, and all warrants drawn by the Secretary of State upon the Treasurer shall be paid by said Treasurer in the order in which they have been presented, and endorsed 'Presented and not paid for want of funds,' whether the same have been issued before or after the passage of this act."

The law of 1872 is not repealed, if indeed it could be repealed, the State having contracted with the public creditor that he shall be paid in accordance with the above quoted legislation, good faith requires that he should be so paid, and it is, to say the very least, doubtful if the Legislature could change the contract with him after receiving the service and issuing and indorsing its warrant. But it is sufficient that it has not sought to change the legislation or terms of contract. On the contrary, it has, in the last appropriation law, reaffirmed them.

This would seem to be plain enough for the guidance of the Treasurer, and if he was without complications, it doubtless would be, and we should hear nothing of this "new departure." I wish to discuss this question candidly and to do no injustice to the Treasurer. There is reason to suppose that some parties in interest at Portland, desired the appropriation law of the late session to exclude the old warrants, and hence probably the act was amended in the Senate by adding the unusual clause above quoted and striking out the words "and set aside," after "specifically appropriated." Still, an opinion of the attorney of one of the Portland parties, has been obtained and furnished the Treasurer, to the effect that only new warrants can be paid. And it is on the strength of this, if strength it has, the Treasurer refuses to pay the warrants "in the order in which they have been presented and endorsed." Of course this will accumulate a large fund in the treasury (presuming that it will be there) to remain idle while the State is paying interest on warrants which should be liquidated by it.

The "legal opinion" is based, if basis it has, on the following provisions of the Constitution:

> "The Legislative Assembly shall provide for raising revenue sufficient to defray the expenses of the State for each fiscal year, and also a sufficient sum to pay the interest on the State debt, if there be any."
> "Whenever the expenses of any fiscal year shall exceed the income the Legislative Assembly shall provide for levying a tax for the ensuing fiscal year sufficient, with other sources of income, to pay the deficiency as well as the estimated expenses of the ensuing fiscal year."

It will be seen the Legislature is here required to make provision for the ensuing fiscal year, and for the arrears of past ones—one as much as the other. Neither duty has precedence or preference, but the one is to be provided for "as well as the" other. Now, does the Legislature fail to provide for either? It would be nothing strange if it did, for there are requirements of the Constitution which the Legislature has neglected. And no officer of the State can supply legislation, or change that had to cure the omission.

It is clear that the Legislature has not, at least, failed to provide for the arrears of former fiscal years, for they specially enact that the appropriations "shall be paid upon warrants in the order in which they have been presented, and endorsed 'Presented and not paid for want of funds,' whether the same have been issued before or after the passage of this act." Here is a clear, direct compliance with the provisions of the Constitution requiring the Legislature to provide for deficiency of other years, so far as the revenue of the treasury for 2 years is sufficient to meet it. Whether thay have neglected the equally, and only equally, enjoined duty of providing for the coming fiscal year, I will not undertake to say. I can only say, if they have the Treasurer can neither make or unmake legislation to cure the omission. If the revenue of the coming fiscal year or two years (and in contemplation of law the annual levy is made by each Legislature) is sufficient to pay the arrears of the past and the expenses of the future, then most certainly they have. At any rate, it has made provision so far as such income shall go, and provision for the Secretary drawing and the Treasurer indorsing warrants against their appropriation. The same provision they have ever made. If they have neglected any duty here, it is not in providing for the deficiency. Nor is it the province of the Treasurer to sit in judgment on the constitutionality of their acts. Treasurers are not selected with reference to such qualification or duty. And, if in this case there was room to doubt as to what the statute requires of him, and there is none, it would seem that he should receive legal advice, if at all, from disinterested and impartial sources.

PUBLIC FAITH.

CAPITAL PUNISHMENT.

About 1807 a poor woman with two children, one at the breast, stole from inside a shop-door a piece of linen worth some seven or eight shillings. She, however, had not proceeded far when she repented of her crime, and was returning to the shop with it when she was arrested. She was tried at the Old Bailey, convicted, and condemned to death. The jury and the prosecutor unanimously recommended the woman to mercy, on account of her husband having been pressed as a sailor, her starving condition at the time, and her previous unblemished character, but all in vain. The judge refused to indorse the application, and the woman was executed at Tyburn, the child being taken from her breast at the foot of the gallows. In the minds of a large majority of the public this execution created great indignation, and a bill was brought into Parliament to abolish the punishment of death for stealing in a shop, to the value of five shillings. This bill was at first thrown out in the House of Peers, the Judges being against it. The bill subsequently passed into law. On the introduction into the House of Lords of a bill for the abolition of the punishment of death for stealing in a dwelling house to the value of forty shillings, the majority of the Judges were against it. Lord Ellenborough was particularly energetic in his opposition, arguing, as the law stood it worked well, and why then should it be altered? One of the Peers was so struck with the validity of the learned Lord's arguments that he said, "We shall not be able to place our heads with safety on our pillows if that bill pass into law!" In the thirty years, from 1799 to 1829, for offenses against the Bank Act alone, 629 men were capitally convicted, and 1,161 were transported; yet, till public opinion became too strong to be disregarded, the Judges offered little opposition to such atrocious cruelty.—The Saturday Journal.

If we did our friend of the McMinnville Reporter injustice in that story about the Sheridan Church and croquet, we are sorry for it and accept his apology. We have no reason to show him malice, nor do we believe he meant to speak depreciatingly of the piety of the good people of Sheridan.

The Albany Democrat says: "The rains of the last two weeks have raised the river so that it is now at a good boating stage, and steamers are whistling at our wharves at all hours of both day and night. An immense amount of grain is being carried down the river, but it will take a good while yet to pump 'Old Linn' dry."

The Directors sold some cattle which they thought to be his, but which he stoutly disclaimed. The head of cattle were sold to pay the tax, and were shot down on Davis' premises and butchered. Now it turns out that Davis did not own the cattle aforesaid, but that they belonged to another party, who will doubtless go after those Directors' scalps."

The Oregon City Enterprise says: "The steamer E. N. Cooke was taken through the locks last Tuesday evening to run on the upper river. This leaves the Senator below the falls alone. But one thing is sure, the Senator cannot take away the freight brought down by all the upper boats, which number now seven, and capable of bringing down about 24,000 tons per week." We suppose 2,400 the Enterprise means.

The Directors of the Blue Mountain University held a special meeting at the M. E. M. Messrs. Hines, Snodgrass and Carter were appointed a committee to draft a course of studies for the University.

The Yamhill Reporter says: "During the late cold snap many farmers seemed quite fearful that the crop of fall wheat would be damaged, and the subject was speculated upon so much that we were induced to make inquiries in regard to the matter. Since the chilling blasts have subsided and the gentle rain-drops have come to make us feel out of danger, we have ventured out from the confines into which Old Boreas had driven us, for the purpose of gathering information and making an estimate on the probable disaster. We have questioned our farmer friends, of different directions, from the dry hills to the soggy bottom lands, and have found that the crop was not in the least injured, and that it is in excellent condition."

The Presbyterian and Congregational Societies of Albany have united in a religious body for purposes of worship. The name of the body is Calvary Society. As the membership of each of these denominations was too small to pay a liberal salary to a minister, it was thought best to unite them for a few years. This was accordingly done, the two churches uniting for a period of three years under the above name, each one preserving its identity as a separate denomination. We are glad to see this, for, as their doctrinal differences are very slight, they can thus work together in the general cause to a much greater advantage, and at the same time can add to the membership of each of the denominations that compose the Society. The following officers of the Society have been elected, and will serve to January 1, 1876: Clerk, E. F. Sox; Treasurer, Dr. Plummer; Executive Committee, Nelson Wright and Professors Warren and Abernethy. The services of a minister who will devote the whole of his time to this congregation will be secured by the first of January, but until that time Rev. E. R. Geary will occupy the pulpit every alternate Sabbath.

On War Eagle mountain there will be two offices, one at Kittie's saloon, in Fairview, and the other at Boyle's store on the Poorman side of the mountain.

The Corinne Mail says: "Now that the Governor has signed the Fort [illegible] and Salt Lake Railroad bill, and it has become a law, we may expect work to commence without delay. It won't hurt our feelings if a big force of men should be put to work at this end of the road in a few weeks; in fact, we should rather like it."

The Steilacoom Express advocates the organization of a Pierce county agricultural society. It says a valuable piece of land and $2,000 were subscribed to secure the Industrial Fair grounds in that county, but failing in getting them, it thinks that amount should be appropriated, with additional subscriptions for the formation of a home society.

The Olympia Echo of Nov. 26th, says: More rain has fallen since last Saturday than at any time within twenty years, so early in the season. Such long and extremely heavy rain falls are seldom witnessed in this country, certainly not so early in the season. We have been on this coast over twenty-one years, and never witnessed such rains in November.

The Denver News says: R. M. Bowman, who came up a day or two ago from San Juan, brings specimens of grey copper-silver ore from the Poughkeepsie mine, in Animas District, which assay from $1,000 to $4,000 to the ton. Also quartz, showing very rich in free gold, from the Little Nellie mine, in Summit District, and from the Belmont mine, in Decatur District. Mr. Bowman will return to the mines in a few days.

In Chehalis county, Judge Jacobs received 41 majority; J. P. Judson, 11; F. H. Cook, 52; J. A. Karr, Joint Representative, 25; M. Z. Goodell, Sheriff, and C. N. Byles, Auditor, were elected without opposition. A. J. Gibson, Saml. Benn and R. Arland were elected County Commissioners; Mr. Scammon, Treasurer; H. D. Taylor, Probate Judge; James Gleason, School Superintendent; C. N. Byles, Surveyor, and John Webster, wreck-master.

John D. Lee, the man arrested and now in prison at Beaver, Utah, awaiting trial on an indictment charging him with being the leader of the Mountain Meadow massacre, says that he intends to give the full history of the occurrence from its inception to its consummation. This narration or confession, or whatever it may be, will be looked forward to with a deep interest, and with a sincere hope that the murderers who have escaped the penalty of their crimes for more than 17 years may at last be brought to justice.

The Courier says: The anniversary of the Washington Territory Auxiliary Bible Society was held in the Presbyterian Church at Olympia, on last Sunday evening. Notwithstanding the severe storm, a good audience assembled. In the absence of the President, the meeting was presided over by His Excellency Governor E. P. Ferry, one of the Vice Presidents of the society. The exercises consisted of singing, prayer, reading of the Holy Scriptures, reports and stirring addresses by Revs. Dr. Atkinson, G[illegible], H[illegible], Elder and Thompson. The collection amounted to $30. Officers for the ensuing year were elected as follows: President, Rev. John R. Thompson; Vice Presidents, Gov. E. P. Ferry, and the pastors of co-operating churches in Olympia; Secretary, G. F. Boynton; Treasurer, W. H. Mitchell; Executive Committee, Hon. Judge Greene, J. B. Allen, and Wm. Brown, together with the Secretary and Treasurer. Rev. Mr. Greer is continued as the Colporteur of the society.

The Montana Herald says the Chinese, almost without exception, are gamblers, but a few days since there came up to Helena, from the Benton country, one Ah Chee, who knew naught of "tricks that are vain," and, as he was liberally supplied with greenbacks, his city brethren in Chinatown used extra exertions to lure him into various gambling games. Their efforts were unavailing, however, until Monday last, when Ah Chee finally consented, but with evident reluctance, to have a little four-handed game of "draw." The game proceeded for a [illegible] and Ah Chee lost considerable money with good grace. A new deck was called for, and Ah Chee dealt. Good hands were evidently out, for each of the four continued to "see" and "raise" the other until the amount up was in the neighborhood of $800, when the city chaps weakened and "called" their country brother. It transpired that the friends severally held four jacks, four queens and four kings, and it further transpired that Ah Chee held four aces, and he proceeded to rake down the money with a "smile that was bland," though not exactly childlike. The smile vanished almost instantly, however, for his companions charged on him fiercely with deadly weapons, a cheese knife about a yard long being one of the weapons used. Ah Chee staid not upon the order of his going, but, with a dexterity only equaled by the nimbleness that he had previously shown in handling the cards, he avoided the thrusts at him, rushed out of the gambling hell and to a place of refuge, getting off with the money in safety.

SATURDAY MORNING, NOV. 28, 1874

A SUGGESTION.

To our enumeration of the jobs and corrupt practices in national and State politics which the Bulletin has championed within the last two years, that paper answers that wherever the Republican party has found rascality in its ranks it has driven out the rascals. It is shrewd enough to put its defense in this shape. "Who was it that defeated Ben. Butler but Republicans?" Such disingenuous pleading is simply disgusting. For while it is true that the men who cleansed the halls of Congress were known as Republicans, it is quite as true that these reforms were, in most instances, accomplished outside the party. Take Butler's case. He was nominated by a regular Republican convention, and thus became the candidate of the party. He controlled the party machinery. He was supported by the Federal officers in his district. Blaine and Dawes, leaders of the Republican party in the House of Representatives, canvassed his district and plead with Republicans to vote for him. In order to defeat him, the men who did it were compelled to go outside, leaving the party organization in his hands. Now consider Poland's case. He received the regular Republican nomination. A large minority of that convention refused to support him, went outside the party, nominated and elected Dennison, an independent candidate. In both cases Republicans were beaten in caucus, and they refused to abide by that decision. What was it the Bulletin used to call Republicans who did that sort of thing?

The Bulletin does not hesitate now to speak of the Jayne and Sanborn "thefts." It calls Governor Shepherd's financiering "the District of Columbia steal." And it says "the Republican party never indorsed or approved the nomination of Geo. H. Williams for Chief Justice!" Indeed, it goes further: "not one of the various matters" condemned by the OREGONIAN within the past two years was ever "indorsed or approved by the Republican party." So far, then, the OREGONIAN has been in accord with the Republican party, hasn't it? Now if you will go back to your files, neighbor, you will find that you have been the champion of every job and jobber, the apologist for all the corruption that the Republican party has thus refused to "indorse or approve." Consider that in 1872 you denounced the Credit Mobilier charge, as slanderous fabrications and calumnies. Remember that you never denounced the Sanborn and Jayne "thefts;" that you grieved over the wickedness of the independent press in pursuing [illegible] Shepherd to his downfall, and that you defended what you now call "the District steal;" that you urged and supported the nomination of Mr Williams; that you clamored for war with Spain, because a dozen or more filibusters were executed in Cuba; that you approved the removal of U. S. District Attorney Gibbs because he undertook to prosecute repeaters in a United States Court. And if you look carefully you will find you have been compromised in the defense of a hundred minor rascalities. When did you ever open your cowardly lips to say that no President, however pure and great, however wise and useful, should be entrusted with a third term? In the triumph of good morals how much of the glory belongs to you? When did you ever say: "That is a bad man, and he should be defeated; notwithstanding he is the regular nominee, his election would be a public calamity?" To-day you can kick the dead lion, Butler, with impunity, he is to be feared no longer. Flattery cannot "soothe the dull, cold ear of death"; no amount of obsequious fawning can purchase favor from him now. But your record stands. Out of our own mouth you are convicted of supporting men and practices which have been repudiated by the party of which you profess to be an "organ."

The trouble all along has been not that you were without a conscience—for your death-bed repentance shows you had one—but that you gave your conscience over into the keeping of men who had none. You felt bound to defend the character and doings of every man who was a stockholder in the close corporation known as the Republican party. Your work was put before you and you had to do it, no matter how dirty it might be. Knowing that your task-masters were corrupt rascals, you yet did their bidding with infamous fidelity. You had to do it: you were an organ.

Now having confessed that the Republican party "never indorsed or approved" the things which you have indorsed and approved, considering, also, that all the reforms which have been accomplished have been brought about against your protest, don't you think the only decent thing you can do is to die?

OREGON AT THE CENTENNIAL.

So much has been said and written about the centennial anniversary of our independence, and so nearly akin to the ordinary Fourth-of-July rhetoric have come to be appeals in its behalf, that the subject is getting stale. This ought not to be so. If the celebration is to have the name of being national, it should be so in fact. In order to make it a success every State in the Union should contribute its just proportion. When the project was first suggested, some jealousy was developed in the East. It was charged that the whole affair was a grand speculation on the part of Philadelphia, and a good many hard things were said. It is gratifying to know that these obstacles have been overcome. Boston was the chief source of opposition, if we do not err. But Boston has recently appointed a committee of solid men to arrange for the proper representation of Massachusetts, and in other parts of the State local committees are actively at work. New York, too, is stirring in the matter. Subscriptions to the $10,000,000 of 6 per cent. stock advertised by the Centennial Board of Finance are coming in with encouraging rapidity. The Pennsylvania managers are known as first-class business men, and they are working with untiring energy.

The appeal of Mr. A. J. Dufur, Commissioner for Oregon, which appeared in the OREGONIAN a day or two since is commended to the people and the press of Oregon. Mr. Dufur has met with a good degree of success in canvassing for subscriptions to stock. He now asks for funds to aid him in the work of collecting and printing information for use at Philadelphia in 1876. The last legislature declined to make an appropriation for this purpose, and Mr. Dufur now appeals for voluntary contributions. It is his plan, we believe, to organize, in each county in the State, a board who will present the matter to the people and receive contributions. We understand that prominent gentlemen in the different counties have indicated their willingness to serve. It is to be hoped that all who have an interest in the good name of our State will lend their aid and see to it that the representation of Oregon at Philadelphia in 1876 be one of which we may not be ashamed.

A SLIGHT ERROR.

Last Wednesday morning the types made us say "the OREGONIAN did not 'commend' the appointment from the ranks of that same ring to the collectorship of Alaska, of a felon—a murderer and fugitive from justice." The sentence should have read: "The OREGONIAN did not 'commend' the appointment from the ranks of that same ring to a collectorship of Alaska," etc. The Bulletin seems to think that some one with whom it has "been acquainted for several years," (Major M. P. Berry, Collector of Customs for the port of Sitka, we presume) will feel offended. If Major Berry were "Collector of Alaska" he might have just cause for offense. But that is not the case; he was appointed Collector of Customs for the port of Sitka, and he is so recognized by the Treasury Department. There is no such office as that temporarily created by a blunder of the types. Besides Sitka, there are four other ports in Alaska, at which Collectors are stationed—Wrangell, Tongass, Kodiak and Ounalaska. The blunder was so palpable that it is hardly necessary now to say we did not allude to Major Berry's office.

Errors of this kind are of frequent occurrence in a printing office. For instance, the Bulletin is frequently devoid of quotation marks in its leading editorials. We may remark also that at the head of its editorial columns, on Thanksgiving Day, appeared this notice:

To-morrow being Thanksgiving Day there will be no paper issued on Friday morning.

Move slowly, neighbor, you live in a [illegible] bedomicile.

Gladstone's bull against the Pope, in which he holds that allegiance to Rome fetters the allegiance of British subjects to their temporal sovereign, created a great stir in England and on the Continent. The London Times says of it: "The important question, what is lawful? can, according to Archbishop Manning, only be decided by the Pope." The Telegraph says: "The pamphlet has revived the nation's confidence in Gladstone." The Pall Mall Gazette says Gladstone has no right to fling a firebrand into the religious community. It thinks it is none of his concern whether Catholic principles lead to disloyalty. The Post says it is not Gladstone's first miscalculation.

Another interesting decision on the right of railroads to limit the time of round-trip tickets has just been decided in the Court of Common Pleas for Toledo, Ohio. About a year ago a man named Eck was ejected from a train after presenting a ticket for a return trip, the limit of which had expired. The judge charged the jury that when Eck purchased the ticket he accepted the terms of the contract printed thereon. The jury gave the plaintiff $712 damages, as he tendered his fare before the train stopped.

Boston papers boast that only twenty lots in the burnt district of 1872 now remain vacant.

GRASSHOPPER VICTIMS.—At the close of the relief meeting I noticed a little girl, about twelve years old, crying most piteously. Two or three other little girls went up to her, put their arms around her neck, and did all they could in their child-like way to comfort her. At last one of them came to me and asked me to talk to her, so I asked her what was the matter. She said that she was hungry, and had had nothing to eat that day. I immediately called the attention of the crowd to the matter, and offered any price for half a sack of flour to be taken to them that night, and to my astonishment in that whole assembly, thirty [illegible] voters being present, there was not one man that had a half sack of flour in the house.—Alma (Neb.) Correspondent Omaha Bee.

FIRE AT TRINITY CHURCH.

Portland was suddenly thrown into a state of excitement about 12 30 on Thursday by an alarm of fire. At that hour a large portion of the community had either just reached their homes or were on the way there from the churches where Thanksgiving services had been held. For some time after the tocsin was sounded many were of the opinion that it was a false signal and paid no further attention to the matter. However, the continued ringing of the bells and soon the shrill whistle from several steam fire engines denoted unmistakably the presence of the dreaded destroyer in some portion of our city. But a few minutes elapsed until the cry was heard simultaneously in almost every direction and eagerly repeated from a thousand throats "Trinity Church is on fire." Since the dreadful experience Portland has recently had in the way of fires the sound of the fire bell conveys notes of fearful import to all and arouses the community like an electric shock. The usual alacrity with which the average Portlander responds to a call of fire was quickened if possible, on this occasion. Trinity Church with its lofty and symmetrical spire pointing away from everything earthly its handsome and ancient gothic dimensions which since the completion have been a source of pride to the parish and an architectural ornament to the whole city was threatened with total destruction. No wonder when the shout was echoed far and wide that the building was on fire the whole community was electrified. A glance toward the large building as it loomed up in the distance with its many graceful angles and curves was sufficient to establish beyond all doubt the worst fears. Smoke could be seen issuing from under a thousand shingles and slowly float upwards in the clear air. Not a streak of flame was to be seen the fire being still pent up and unable to burst forth. From appearances the fire had been smouldering for some time but had not gained much headway. Within ten minutes after the first tap was given, the whole Fire Department was on the ground and had the water through the hose and on the building. Ladders were placed against the side of the church and the undaunted firemen scaled them carrying along up their hose. But it was soon discovered that the fire had insinuated itself along the roof between the shingles and ceiling. From one end of the Church to the other the rafters were ceiled on the underside with dry cedar lumber, rendered more inflammable by being painted and varnished. The fire originated in the rear of the building from the furnace used in the basement to heat up the auditorium. By some strange and unaccountable means the fire got between the roof and the ceiling in the chancel, and thus slowly and unobserved crept along until the roof of the main building was reached. Before any human being was aware of the presence of the destroyer, it had crawled some distance along the main roof. When the firemen had succeeded in [reach]ing the roof, with the hose, they found themselves unable to do anything—powerless. As yet the fire had not burst from the roof or burned down through the ceiling into the building. There was no possible means of getting at the destroyer from above or below. Meantime the fire kept gaining and presently the sheeting and shingles melted away before its fiery breath in several spots and the flames shot through the apertures like an escaped demon. This was hailed with pleasure by the firemen for they could now combat the foe. A long and desperate struggle ensued. Sometimes it seemed as if the fire had almost succumbed to the powerful and well directed streams and anon the flames would leap forth fiercely in another part of the roof. A vast quantity of water was thrown on and about the church but it was impossible for the firemen to have done otherwise. The streams had to be thrown between every rafter, before the fire could be subdued. Above was the roof, and below was the ceiling effectually protecting the fire from the efforts of the brave firemen. To add to this disadvantage, was the extreme steepness of the roof and no means of scaling it but by ladders the lower ends of which had to be placed on the eaves. But against all these disadvantages the men worked long and desperately, and after a contest of more than an hour and a half the fire was got under control. This was not accomplished until the fire had destroyed nearly one-half of the roof and burned from end to end at the top. The large timbers supporting the roof escaped with comparatively trifling damage, but the rafters between were entirely burned in twain where they were united at the top. The alarm was given at half past 12 o clock, but it was after 4 in the evening before the fire was entirely subdued. Without exception, it was the most difficult fire, to be no more extensive which the Department of Portland were ever called upon to conquer. In considering the character of the building the headway the fire had gained before it was discovered, and the many disadvantages the firemen were obliged to labor under, the only wonder is that the entire building was not destroyed. All honor we say, to the gallant men, and boys too who at the hazard of life and limb saved the building from destruction and the city another terrible conflagration. Fortunately there happened to be no wind stirring, or the consequences might have been far more disastrous

Several thousand persons were present during the fire, many of whom rendered all the assistance in their power. Before the fire had gained much headway the cushions belonging to the seats were taken from the church and saved. Most of the furniture in the building—chairs, reading desks, etc.—were also removed. The large and magnificent organ belonging to the church was considerably damaged, and narrowly escaped irrecoverable ruin. Had the instrument been securely covered with oilcloth or some other article impervious to the water it might have escaped unscathed. There was abundant time for this precaution to have been observed but it was neglected in the excitement of the hour. The instrument was fairly flooded with water and has probably sustained great damage. The elegant and costly carpet, which might also have been hastily torn up and saved was flooded with water and totally ruined

The following is the insurance, loss, etc. In the Imperial and Queen the building is insured for $2 250 and the organ $1 500 in the Home Mutual, the building for $12,500 the organ for $1 500. Total insurance on the building $14 750, total insurance on the organ, $3 000. The damage to the building will be from $6 000 to $9,000. As yet the insurance companies have appointed no appraisers and the damage to the church can only be roughly estimated. It is impossible at present to form any idea as to the damage sustained by the organ. Mr G L DeFrans has been employed by the Vestry to take down the organ and determine the extent of damages. Yesterday afternoon assisted by another person, he commenced to take the instrument to pieces. When taken down it will be removed to a large room and dried and the damage ascertained. A number of carpenters began work yesterday morning to clear away the debris. We understand that it is the intention of the V[estry] to let the contract for the rebuilding of the church as soon as the damages can be appraised. There being no insurance on the carpet furnishing etc the church will have to stand that loss

About half past 11 o clock on Friday morning a second alarm of fire was given. A spark of fire which had been left unextinguished among the rafters, was fanned by the wind into a blaze and began to burn brightly. Although wearied out by the day's labor the companies were promptly on the scene and extinguished the fire in a few moments

UNION THANKSGIVING SERVICES.

DISCOURSE DELIVERED AT THE BAPTIST CHURCH, [illegible]

BY REV R BENTLEY, NOV 26, 1874

Thy vows are upon me O God. I will render praises unto Thee —Ps 56 12.

The vow is a term used to express a solemn promise made with religious motives. It partakes of the nature of a sacrament with which it differs mainly in this that the sacrament is a promise that Deity by a sign makes with man while the vow is man's promise to his Maker.

The rainbow which is the pledge of God's promise to man Bishop Taylor in these words likens to a sacrament. God sometimes sent a light of fire and pillar of cloud and the sacrament of a rainbow to guide his people through their portion of sorrows. No mind can conceive the appalling disasters that would result from a change in the pledges of God to His creatures. The apparent irregularities of Nature put in commotion a summer pushed a little beyond its usual length when though the trade winds cease the rains do not fall affect for worse the whole animal and vegetable Creation. So nicely has our Creator balanced the seasons for our health and happiness that when in Nature's wide compensations there occur some local oscillations communities sicken and die.

Could we suppose the Creator inconstant in the exercise of His power for an instant how stupendous would be the results. Suppose the inconstancy. Almighty power that holds all in His Omnific arm loosens the reins and is false to His original plans, worlds would trundle from their orbits, immense spheres would collide and the collapse of our world would be as sudden as the boy's bursting bubble.

But God is true. Nature adds her testimony to the constancy of the Creator not only in the conspicuous forces that are referred to but also in the hidings of his power.

God's covenant relations with men are constant. All that he has promised must be fulfilled which it be in [illegible] in that which is known as the Abrahamic covenant in which are involved all who truly and heartily turn to God on the promise which speaks personally to me. Not one jot or one tittle of the law shall pass away until all be fulfilled.

God has condescended to our weakness for as men verily swear by the greater and an oath for confirmation is to them an end of all strife so God willing more abundantly to show unto the heirs of promise the immutability of his counsel confirmed it by an oath that by two immutable things in which it was impossible for God to lie we might have a strong consolation who have fled for refuge to lay hold upon the hope set before us. The two immutable things in which believers may confide are firstly the oath that Abraham should have a son (the Messiah) in whom all nations shall be blessed (Gen 22 18) Secondly the oath that this son should be a high priest forever after the order of Melchisedek.

Precisely what the psalmist meant when he said "Thy vows are upon me Oh God" cannot be definitely understood. It might have referred to vows assumed for him in infancy or to the vows made when he was anointed king or he might have considered his whole being dedicated to God and in this general sense felt his religious obligations. Whether his vows were specific or general he acknowledges their binding force saying "Thy vows are upon me O God."

The Hebrews not unfrequently placed outward signs of vows they had taken as in the setting up of stones. God meets the Christian believer in a covenant of which the eucharist and the rite of baptism are memorials.

In the privacy of the soul in the closet or during a period of sickness or in some great financial pressure, or in a time of danger or of excitement almost all persons have made vows wherein Heaven was invoked to witness to the sincerity of their purposes for the future.

The forgotten vows of men are still legible to Him who reads in the dark as well as in the light. In the better moments of the lives of the most obdurate there are half formed purposes that if carried out would waft them ultimately to Heaven with convoys of angels but their good intentions, sacred vows fell to the ground like spring blossoms never to produce fruit in this world but to bear testimony of spiritual perfidy in the next. Personal honor and security and national honor alike are secured by fulfilling the promises which each man makes to his brother man.

SOCIAL VOWS

It is an easy matter to promise but not always easy to fulfill it. Promises are uttered by us as easily [illegible] in the direction of the wind's current.

There are the promises of parents to children easily made but forgotten or unfulfilled prove irreparably disastrous. There are promises of neighbor to neighbor promises given in business promises made by public men to communities and promises made to which earth and heaven are invoked as witnesses to their utterance and to the binding nature of their obligation. There are promises of money to be paid promises of friendship of probity of honor and of love.

In business circles resort is made to the promissory note where the obligation is acknowledged by the obligated party.

Promises are made in the court of justice. Witnesses judge and jury are adjured by the presence of Almighty God that for the ends of justice they will declare and promote the truth the whole truth and nothing but the truth God being their helper.

If a man fails to meet the obligation of his promissory note it goes to protest. If a witness is discovered swearing to things that are untrue he is a branded perjurer. The nature of a promise given under any circumstance in relation to any person or thing is both solemn and serious. Promises made under given forms of law when broken assume a criminal character.

Lovers in the glow and warmth of first love make their hymenial treaty first alone in the shaded arbor or in the homeward walk from the village church. The ring of choicest gold is given as a pledge of mutual love. At the celebration of marriage bride and bridegroom stand in the presence of witnesses among whom are their dearest earthly relations including if possible the parents brothers and sisters of the happy pair and in the presence of the minister who personates the solemnities of the church through whom appeal is made to unseen witnesses to witnessing angels and the Great Searcher of Hearts, that they pledge their love to one another. In this vow Deity having been invoked to sanction the nuptials the ceremony fitly concludes. "What God hath joined together let no man put asunder." How sacred are these promises! Alas too readily forgotten in some cases. The vows which we assume in society, in church or State should be carefully studied before taken and sacredly regarded subsequently. The sacredness of a promise made by one individual to another illustrates the sacredness of the promise which one nation makes to another.

NATIONAL TREATIES.

National promises are commonly called treaties. Among ancient nations treaties were secured as you know by hostages. A member of the royal family or a prominent member of the government who was not of the royal blood was given as security that given negotiations should be carried out. Again terms of agreement were signed in modern times the security of the enforcement of the promise being really that might makes right. The treaty of Westphalia marks a new era in the history of international law. Its central idea is expressed in the well known phrase "balance of power" which in reality was a balancing of bayonets. The strength of the treaty was such that if one nation proved untrue the other nations allied in the covenant would turn against the recreant one.

The guns of Sedan let loose the nations interlocked by that celebrated treaty. Not unexpectedly the Black Sea controversy arose touching especially the marine and commercial interests of the Empires of Great Britain and Russia. Both nations were looking to India and the former not improbably desired to blockade the ships of the latter. For a time war seemed imminent. In an hour of peril the ministers of war representing the allied powers (France excepted) recently bound in treaty met on the sea-girt isle and the Council decided to grant to Russia what could not well be denied her, even though to her ships of war, the Bosphorus should give free [pass]age from the Black Sea, by the defiles of Constantinople to the Propontis and the Hellespont. The Nations, through these ministers of war formed a treaty which provided for giving to Russia a free passage through the Black Sea. The treaty was signed by the representative powers and sealed by their respective governments. These Nations, thus interested in the treaty were called the Co-signatory Powers. Emphasis here was given to the promises of the Nations.

The treaty of Washington gives glory to the past decade. It will become more thoroughly appreciated in the next century than in this. The noise and glitter of European wars and the brilliant exploits of victors for a time overshadow this peaceful settlement between the two great christian Nations—England and America.

The question whether a scion of the Hohenzollern family should rule in Spain or the question of the precise boundaries of the Rhine were not as difficult of adjustment as the settlement of the increasingly intricate Alabama claims and the long aggravated claims growing out of the Canadian fisheries. When it is considered that notwithstanding an element so bitterly hostile as the Fenians an element which so long has disturbed that old sore caused by the revolution that this adjustment has been made by a few reasonable men of both countries consulting together and that the same was ratified promptly by the respective Governments, the transaction thoroughly gratifies all lovers of peace.

This treaty claims no hostages no bribes says nothing of the balance of power but a high appeal is made to the honor of the two leading Christian nations of the world to be true to their promises.

England's late Premier at a banquet given at Guild Hall London in response to a speech made by the American Minister said "The treaty of Washington not only obviated future controversies but it was an extension of that international code which was most remarkable as one of the triumphs of modern civilization and might possibly inaugurate the peaceful arbitrament of all disputes among nations."

We claim to be a Christian nation not in a strictly legal or technical sense but according to the nation's unwritten law. We point to the facts that the Sabbath is more or less observed the Bible is the sacred book of the Courts of our land. Christian Chaplains accompany our sailors and soldiers, they open with prayer our halls of legislation and both Houses of Congress and to-day we are observing as a Christian people by the direction of the Federal and State government a day of National Thanksgiving unto our God. If we are a Christian nation by the spirit and genius of our institutions we ought to be conspicuous among the nations of the earth for personal and national honor.

The press the popular mind, the very air is filled with rumors of our national corruption and consequent degeneracy. It is an easy matter to join in sweeping and hasty generalizations concerning our public men. Some of our noblest statesmen are to-day politically buried by the unmerited condemnation of the public. The most popular representative of the ministry has been assailed by shafts of criticism and slander which would have crushed an ordinary man. Brave veterans of our armies who deserve the nation's best offerings have been subjected to criticisms and scandals to the shame of the public defamers. It is an old maxim of government that it is better that ninety and nine guilty should go unpunished rather than one innocent man should suffer. Certainly this is applicable to the chastisements inflicted on society. The virtues as well as the vices of our public men ought to be weighed by the social tribunal and a fair verdict given.

In what a foul atmosphere is the rising generation compelled to breathe. What suspicions, what scur[rility] [illegible] made for purely partisan purposes. Our children hear the names of statesmen associated with that which is dishonest. Our Legislatures and Congress are declared cesspools of corruption whose stench cries to heaven for redress. Are we not so far as we fail to discriminate between the honorable and dishonorable and make party fealty the standard of honor and purity rearing a generation that will associate statesmanship with perjury and corruption? It will be a sad result if the present generation should push to its logical sequences the popular estimate of our leading statesmen and institutions that obtain to day. I submit whether if there be no change contempt for men and institutions must not be the inevitable result.

The recent promises of some of our leading papers encourage us to look for reform. They announce a broader platform in which they will be able to set forth the excellence of the men and measures of an opposite party together with the defects as well as excellencies of their own. Such a high minded and magnanimous press while it would be true to its party (in the highest sense) and is yet strong enough to stand above and point out its errors and help the opposing party by commending its excellencies would be a benediction to the nation. Its candor and truth would give strength to its party.

The want of the public is a just estimate of our public men and measures a fair discrimination between the worthy and the base. That we have men that all the wealth of monopolies could not buy both in Congress and in Legislatures no one doubts all honor to these honorable men.

It must be frankly stated too that a system of stealing has been carried on by men who had sworn to defend the welfare of the country and God has been called in as a witness to their perfidy. Like barnacles to a ship like the sea anemones that cling to the rocks these hungry political jackals have clung to the national carcass. They would bribe the Deity with their stolen treasures banish the decalogue and pocket the moral government of Jehovah. The public conscience has been specially aroused. Men that are not sought after in primaries who have not studied the craft of electioneering are just now at a premium.

The public demand downright straight forward honest men. Such men as have a clear conscience who distinguish between right and wrong men who believe in a Divine government and a Supreme Ruler of the Universe whose promise is a vow—whose vow is a sacrament in which God and men are covenanted. Men of such convictions are safer custodians of authority than others with oaths promises and pledges given when there is a depraved conscience that can afford no force to a vow or an oath. Individuals are unsafe guardians of the law who will receive or by any indirect process connive at a bribe.

Of all governments the Republican is weakest when the conscience is compromised in its officials or stultified among the people. Conscience is the spinal column of the Republic. Without it the nation must sink either to anarchy or despotism. That nation whose commerce whose laws whose religion whose internal and international regulations recognize the higher laws of Jehovah, will have the mighty forces of God's government working in its favor.

Statesmanship is the need of the hour. Our law makers and rulers are many of them mere jobbers. By a lucky turn of the political wheel they have ridden into an office whose duties they fail to appreciate but which they are to hold for a term of two or four years. They must make hay while the sun shines. Instead of laying broad and deep plans worthy of the statesman their ingenuity is displayed in bartering for power by peddling small offices. They have not been trained for statesmen. Votes may make any man a Senator but majorities cannot make a statesman.

Naturally enough our rulers and law makers are largely drawn from the legal profession since it is more closely allied to statesmanship than is any other pursuit. The Grangers movement will probably introduce more men from the industrial classes. Occasionally a clergyman departs from the active ministry to play the role of a statesman.

Not a few have been drawn from the military ranks. The soldier always fascinates the masses. Yet the genius of statesmanship and the military genius are diverse. The statesman secures the assent of the people by slow deliberate processes while the soldier's duties are compassed in two words "Command and Obey." As a rule the statesman would make a hesitating soldier. He would begin to lobby when he ought at once to lay siege to the enemy. Conversely the soldier would make a too impetuous statesman.

Gen Grant has won for himself that mixed compliment that is associated with the Duke of Wellington viz. He was a great General but a moderate statesman. With all due regard to the great Captain of our armies to whom we have cling with no little hero-worship we should look at a continuance of a soldier President as a misfortune scarcely less than that of a precedent of a third term.

Statesmanship was a study with the ancients. Lycurgus the Spartan lawgiver and Cicero Rome's great statesman and orator were men of great erudition. They traveled from country to country and broadly observed the practical workings of governments they came in contact with the greatest thinkers of their age, and the study was statesmanship. The ancients had a high ideal of the statesman. Such is the ideal needed to-day. I assume of course that perfect statesmanship demands a culture that is consecrated to God and man.

That was a just remark of Daniel Webster that the religion of the New Testament that religion which is founded on Jesus Christ is as sure a guide to duty in politics and legislation as in any concern in life. Assuming when I speak of the qualities of the statesman I assume that at the basis of his character is the religious element.

The coming statesman must master political and social science the relations between the wealthy and the industrial classes between monopolists and Grangers between free trade and tariff in a word he must riddle to be successful these knotty problems growing out of the relations existing between labor and capital.

The breadth of culture of some of our modern statesmen is worthy of the emulation of the young men who aspire to this high calling. Disraeli, outvoted in Parliament writes the telling story of Lothair. The Earl of Derby retires from Parliament and writes an English classic. The Translation of the Iliad. Gladstone in the midst of the premiership writes vigorous articles for leading reviews.

Foremost among American statesmen were Seward and Sumner. The former handled nations as easily as colonies while Sumner in his later addresses in the Senate raised such expectations that telegraphic lines and submarine cable became the vehicles to convey his weighty words, and the intelligent of America and Europe were his attentive auditors.

PRAISES UNTO GOD

The Psalmist remembers not only the nature of a vow but he purposes praise. "I will render praises unto thee."

We naturally seek out the causes of thanks and begin with home. Sons and daughters have come a thousand miles to-day to be at home once more and rejoice around the common hearthstone. But the stranger will shed a tear as amid strange faces and scenes he misses the loving family group. And oh in these homes to day how many missing ones there are. But grief turns into joy when we remember that dear ones have gone out from this to that better home. In that home there will be no missing ones then. Eternity shall be one hymn of thanksgiving and of unalloyed praise unto him that hath loved us and washed us from our sins in his own blood. (Rev 1 5)

GOD'S PROMISES TO MEN

Happy morning would it be for us all could we be true to our vows unto God and remember that God is faithful to his. Promises freighted with a glorious immortality are proffered you. They are pledges from God himself who cannot lie. Charge not God with perfidy by your doubt. Bring before God your best offerings. Ye poor and widowed bring your mites. Ye men of wealth bring your substance to God by blessing His poor and advancing His kingdom.

I take one promise from the Divine word. It is the form of a contract signed by the Almighty. Brother men take this contract home with you close the contract with the Deity and try it. "Bring ye all the tithes into the one house that there may be meat in mine house and prove me now herewith saith the Lord of Hosts if I will not open you the windows of Heaven and pour you out a blessing that there shall not be room to receive it." (Mal. 3 10)

From home we look to our city and State and feel cause for devout thanks.

My experience on the Pacific slope has led me to the conclusion that the Oregonian pursues a different policy from the Californian in the representation of his country. The Californian has a grand country and he will not tarnish his idol with such disagreeable statements of facts as brown hills occasional drouths fleas gophers, grasshoppers and earthquakes. Oregonians have a staple joke on the rains and the Californian very good naturedly will tell you that they can tell a "Webfoot" by the way he carries an umbrella or lights a match.

The impression is made upon one at a distance that this is not an healthy country. But what are the facts? I chanced to meet yesterday morning a lady from the North of Ireland who said that the climate of Portland was almost exactly like that of Dublin and in the afternoon two different families from Cornwall England who made the observation that the climate was very similar to that of their home. Whoever dreamed that that land of roast beef and plum pudding was not most desirable for health. We are thankful for a healthy country for a land where abundant harvests are the rule for lands whose fertility are unsurpassed for forests that could supply timber for the navies of the world for the magnificent rivers rivaling the majestic Amazon and for mountains more than Mount Hermon or Mount Blanc for a land so sublime and picturesque as to make the Atheist pray and the mathematician tune his lyre where greenbacks are sold by the package and rich men are democratic and poor men are aristocratic where intelligence is diffused and Christianity is adopted.

The next decade will see our visions of a completed railroad by way of Salt Lake and a branch from Winnemucca. Loaded passenger and freight trains direct from the East will tell rapidly upon the growth of our State while our Portland ers will get aboard the lightning train for San Francisco at 1 P M and after refreshing sleep while the iron steed is plying through tunnels and gorges and rich valleys they will take their breakfast at the Palace Hotel while in keeping with all progress the broad bosom of the Columbia will be fitly graced by floating palaces that belong to the sisterhood found on the Mississippi and the Hudson.

This may seem fanciful but we hope prophetic. We thank God for freedom from pestilence fire and sword for a Christian nation without a hierarchy for a culture that is true because it is religious for our abundant harvests and happy husbandmen for our extensive and extending commerce for the advantages of sound learning placed within the reach of all the people.

For the means of grace and for the hope of glory in view of all these mercies [illegible]

AMUSEMENTS.

[illegible] well known actor will be the recipient of a benefit at Oro Fino Theater on Monday evening. Bulwer's great play of the "Lady of Lyons" will be produced

The Theater —Last evening a good audience was present to witness the great sensational drama of "L'Article 47" or, "Under the Ban." This is without exception, one of the most exciting plays ever put upon the stage here. Mr Sawtelle as Mons Duhamel was superb. Madame Phelps as Cora the Forsaken Creole, did some artistic acting. Her impersonation of the role was characterized by great warmth, power and true dramatic fire. In the second and third acts her rendition was far beyond what the audience had reason to expect and at the conclusion of the crazy scene, she was called before the curtain in response to a prolonged outburst of applause. Miss Morgan as Marcelle was quiet, graceful and at home. Burrows as Pontain was as usual exceedingly clever. The other characters of the play were well represented. We hope to see "L'Article 47" repeated at an early day. A grand matinee on Saturday afternoon on which occasion "Marble Heart" will be produced. This evening Boucicault's great play of "Arrah Na Pogue."

The Turners of Oregon City like their brethren of Portland, evidently believe that "there is no such word as fail" at least their undertakings in the way of entertaining their friends are always highly successful and our dancing reporter deems it a great privilege to attend. On Thursday night our neighbor at the Falls fairly outdid herself and the attendance of fair women and brave men would have done credit to a city of far greater pretensions. Upwards of sixty couple were present. Pope's new hall was handsomely decorated, and the lovers of Terpsichore enjoyed the mazy dance until near break of day. During the course of the evening a gymnastic exhibition was given by the Turners and pupils and a vocal duet was rendered in excellent style by Miss Nettie Post and Mr Hatch. The music was furnished by Prof Sedlack's band with Charley Graham as prompter. Quite a number of ladies and gentlemen from this city were present. The Oregon City young ladies are noted for their sociability as well as beauty and we opine that a tender spark was kindled in the hearts of some of our Portland boys. They all speak in terms of highest praise of the treatment received. The general verdict is "What an enjoyable affair!" We hope that they may be often repeated and that we may often be enabled to attend

Pause while you read this! The season for parties and balls has arrived and the cold dreary days and nights of winter will soon visit us. Every young man old man and boy for that matter likes to present a neat appearance when attending parties the theater or walking about the streets. They likewise desire to be well provided against the cold blasts of snow and rain. What contributes more to the personal appearance and comfort of a gentleman or boy than a nice closely fitting suit of clothes set off with a heavy warm overcoat? Why will any one be so foolish as to go without either when BECK & WALDMAN have everything in that line. Beck & Waldman in laying in their immense fall and winter stock of Clothing, have exercised great care and selected with reference to the demands of trade. They have purchased their goods low and are determined not to be undersold. Let the public note this fact

The great Frenchman Altaroche made specialties of irony and sarcasm in all his writings but JOHN O NIEL & CO make specialties of selling the finest clothing underwear cravats ties and hats at unparalleled low prices. For a winter suit theirs are of the best so get yourself dressed and be at rest. This is not irony or sarcasm but stubborn fact as everybody will find out who goes to their store. Naked truth is good but people can't go about in that way and must have clothing and the supplies received by this firm are just what are wanted for the season

A hypocrite is a most detestable character—If in morals he may only deceive himself but when he experiments upon the lives of his fellowmen and hopes for advantage even to the injury of others he becomes pestiferous. There are certain abominable dregs thrown together which are claimed to be curative a persistance in taking which will entail most unhappy results upon the sufferer. When to this is added hypocrisy because they are claimed to be "Temperance Drinks" and all for money the outrage upon morals and humanity is complete. But the old fashioned well tried PLANTATION BITTERS have gone right on doing their work well for all

Sore Throat.—The first approach of this terrible [illegible] should be well watched remedies applied or else it will increase rapidly and do its deadly work suddenly. A few drops of the MEXICAN MUSTANG LINIMENT applied by friction to the neck will remove the internal inflammation by external irritation. The disease is rebuked and the patient speedily recovers. Multitudes of lives have been saved by this embrocation

Ugly persons pretend to despise the doll baby beauty (so they invariably call it) of a cheerful happy belle. If such ever had any beauty they had long ago separated from it by using vile unguents and compounds which disfigured their faces, and they pretend to despise the great boon of personal beauty. Don't believe any woman who says she "would not be pretty." It is not natural. The multitudes who use HAGAN'S MAGNOLIA BALM and retain their beauty contradict any such assertion

Edward the Confessor! The predecessor of William of Normandy who died in the same year that his country was subjugated had been educated in Normandy. Upon his accession to the British throne he attempted to introduce Norman fashions—he succeeded in all but the curtailment of the people's hair—the Saxons wore long hair and the Normans kept theirs close cropped. The public bore every indignity but this nor could he or his successor William make their subjects destroy their crown of glory. But there are many men and women too who neglect their hair, and lose its beauty, when they might retain it by the use of LYON'S KATHAIRON

A POOR INVENTOR'S STORY

A [illegible] BEHIND THE STAGE DOOR IN THE ACADEMY—A MAN WHO HAS DONE MORE FOR THE WORLD THAN THE WORLD FOR HIM

[From the N Y Sun]

In 1844 a sixteen year old boy tired of the monotony of his country life ran away from his [illegible] in Dutchess county and came to New York and shipped before the mast in the [illegible] between New York and Glasgow. Among the passengers was Mr Thomas B Stillman the Superintendent of the Novelty Works. He saw in the young sailor evidence of more than ordinary intelligence and ingenuity and invited him to enter the Novelty Works as an apprentice. A few weeks later the boy was an apprentice in the boiler making and engineering department of the Novelty Works. This apprentice was William I Freligh whose namesake and nephew is the proprietor of the historic Bowery Theater and whose brother is the millionaire Dr Martin Freligh.

When about 20 years old the young man invented a diving dress. He was an expert swimmer and diver and thought he could make something that would be an improvement on the diving bell. He had a glass helmet made with an air tube connecting with two wooden [illegible], which he made himself. Embarking with them in a flat boat he went down to a depth of twenty five feet. Going deeper he experienced difficulty in breathing under the pressure of the water on his sides. He then made an india rubber vest with steel ribs and with this he was able to walk from the foot of Cedar street across the North river to Sybil's cave, in Hoboken. He sold this apparatus to a Boston man for $600.

ROBERT SCHUYLER'S MUNIFICENCE.

Young Freligh served his time in the Novelty Works and at the age of 21 was engaged by Robert L Schuyler then general superintendent of the Jersey City Ferry Company, and was to be paid $600 a year, as an engineer on the ferry boats. The young man had not been long in his new position before he saw that an improvement might be made in the working of the fires. He accordingly invented the revolving grate, and it speedily took the place of the old flat grate in all the ferry boats, and was put into the steamship Kamschatka which Schuyler was building for Nicholas of Russia. As a reward of merit Schuyler gave the inventor a lustrous pair of patent leather boots.

About this time Croton water was introduced on the ferry boats. At first it was pumped into the boilers while cold thus of course diminishing the steam and necessitating an increased expenditure of fuel. Freligh invented an apparatus by which the water in the tanks was heated by the waste steam to a temperature of 196°, thus saving ten per cent of the fuel. For this invention Schuyler gave him a double-barreled "stub in twist" shot gun.

A MURDER.

Not long after this a South American Spaniard one Don Gonzales, came to this city to procure plans for a boat to navigate the rapids and shoal waters of the upper Amazon. He saw Schuyler in relation to the boat. Schuyler spoke to Freligh as the man most likely to invent such a boat. He proved equal to the emergency and soon invented a boat for the purpose. It was an ordinary hull mounted on a strong platform the whole supported by three air tight cylinders which rested on the water. A model of this novel craft was made large enough to carry a boy, and a trial was made in the Morris canal basin. The model showed that probably a [illegible] capable of carrying 2,000 passengers would draw less than six inches of water. The Don, delighted, at once engaged Freligh to go to South America to superintend the construction of the boat at a [illegible] of $6,000 a y[illegible] [illegible] the $600 he was already [illegible]. Just before he and Gonzales were ready to start the Spaniard one day went into a cigar store in Canal street [illegible]. It is believed that he was murdered for his money.

Four years later Freligh engaged as engineer for the steamer Black Warrior, plying between this port and New Orleans, and for her he invented the "combination gauge" which tells the engineer in his room [illegible] force pump is working, the temperature of the water in the "hot well," and the density of the water in the boiler. On the homeward trip after this gauge had been adjusted, one of the passengers, named Mackay, saw this gauge, recognized its value and learned that no patent had been taken out for it. On landing he went to Washington and took out a patent in his own name. Freligh without money to contest the right of the robber took $50 from Mackay, and gave up his claim to an invention worth thousands of dollars.

A SCOTCH ENGINEER,

Freligh after two years as the Warrior's engineer, became engineer of the City of Richmond, running from Philadelphia to Richmond. For her he invented the self acting governor valve, an invaluable invention, which yielded him nothing. For years the young man continued his profession of engineer for vessels running to South America the West Indies and to Europe and invented a lamp and [illegible], which was used in the navy yard for [illegible].

MONEY MAKING ON THE ERIE

Freligh's most important invention was a lubricator, which filled up [illegible] in the iron of a cylinder kept it completely polished and made the cylinder last much longer than it ordinarily would. The next thing was to [illegible] of the [illegible] of the railroad men for it was especially intended for locomotives. While in this city between trips [illegible] a letter of introduction [illegible] his [illegible] to Mr [illegible] Moran president of the Erie Railway. Mr Moran gave him a letter to the master mechanic and that dignitary received [illegible], calling him a d—— Yankee inventor, but in obedience to the letter from Mr Moran the master mechanic directed an engineer to take a [illegible] to Dunkirk. The locomotive came back with the best looking cylinder on the road. The master mechanic apologized for his impoliteness and after a three weeks trial the engineer made affidavit that the use of the lubricator would enable a locomotive to draw one more loaded car than it otherwise could. Armed with this affidavit, Freligh sought Mr Moran and was told to go to the general supply agent who would make arrangements for using the lubricator. He was met with the question

"Have you $6,000?"

"What for?" said Freligh. "What?"

"Because," said the agent "I get $6,000 from the firm from whom we now buy our oils and if you will pay $6,000 I'll buy yours"

"This was a deadener on me," said Freligh, "and I had to let the matter drop."

DEALINGS WITH JAMES FISK JR

In 1869 Freligh quit the sea and went into the ship and candle business. In the fall of 1871 he [illegible] place the lubricator before the public. He got a letter of introduction to Colonel James Fisk Jr and with the old affidavit in his pocket went to the Erie office.

"I want to talk to you twenty minutes" said Freligh.

"Colonel Fisk [illegible] "Go ahead" said he. Freligh went ahead told what he wanted and showed the affidavit. "It looks like a good thing" said the Colonel "come up [illegible] again in ten days." Freligh saw Colonel Fisk several times and about Christmas the Colonel told him he would give him $5,000 worth of stock in the Opera House $5,000 in the Pavonia Ferry $5,000 in the Erie and $15,000 in money if he would tell him (Fisk) and one other man the secret of the compound. The day was appointed for the disclosure of the secret but before it came Colonel Fisk was in his grave.

This was the last effort that [illegible] get his invention before the public. Without money, out of health he was glad to accept a place as stage-door [illegible] at the Academy of Music and there he sits to day still inventing, still hopeful.

A MARVELLOUS CASE.—There is severe but unintended satire in the language used by a Massachusetts nominee for Congress in a letter declining to be a candidate. "When I recall," he says, "the many instances of lives mutilated and blighted by discontent and restlessness engendered by the fascinations of the Capitol, I shrink from the hazard. I dread power of incapacitating those who come within its charmed precincts for the quiet pleasures and the ordinary employments and aspirations of life. I therefore, with great reluctance, but with well weighed resolution decline to be a candidate for the office named."

Latest Liverpool advices denote a quiet market Pacific coast wheat ranged from 9s 10d a10s 1d for average and 9s 11d@10s 0d for club per cental. The London market quoted at 45s 6d per quarter for average quality just shipped and 46s per quarter for average nearly due at Queenstown.

The local money market [illegible] with a heavy demand from those who are engaged in the grain movement. But [illegible] per offering in the market meets with favor. Outside of the wheat shippers or those in some way connected with that branch of trade calls for loans are not pressing or large and with carefulness all will be able to get through the season without serious embarrassments. Henceforward it is hoped our exports will compare more favorably with our imports than during the past few months.

The volume of trade to day is not large but of such proportions as not to leave business men discouraged. A fair degree of activity is manifest in staple groceries and provisions with an advancing tendency noticed in some lines. The holiday trade promises to be rather better than it was last year.

The Wheat Market

Since our last review of affairs in this branch of trade matters have changed but little. The report telegraphed from Europe that an advance of 1s per cental had taken place on the continent gave holders a ground of hope that some beneficial effect would result to our Home market but as yet the advance has not manifested itself either in England or on this side the seas. About the date of the dispatch above referred to private telegrams from Liverpool indicated no corresponding change at that point and we can only say that our home market is firm with heavy receipts by boat. The vessels here are filling up quite rapidly in most cases the James Wishart having dropped down the river with most of her cargo on board the Roslin Castle will follow to-morrow with 920 tons as will also the bark Dunsinane with a full cargo goes also to morrow, and the Lizzari Clan Macleod and Globe are loading with reasonable rapidity.

The amount of wheat in store here is considerable. The cargoes of the ship Zelica discharging ballast and the bark Heros coming up the river we are informed are already in sight and the boats are bringing down the grain at the rate of 600 or 700 tons per day. We learn also from steamboat men that the estimated quantity in store on the river from Harrisburg down, is 60,000 tons. It will require several weeks, with all the boating facilities to bring this amount to this point and fully as much time will probably elapse before we have enough vessels in port to carry it away. It will not all be sold however the Grangers under their arrangement will ship some and some will be held over but at a low estimate, on the river, within the distance named there are at least 40,000 tons which will be sold for export. Until this large amount is closed out we may expect that our little not on the river will be put on the market owing to the much greater cost of transportation by land. The competition between the Companies navigating the river is so active that freights are down to a very low figure with some prospect of a still further decline. The producers who are in condition to avail themselves of these reduced inland ocean freights would realize handsomely were the foreign markets active and better but the low prices and dull markets abroad more than offset the advantages of reduced freights.

In the San Francisco telegrams below there is very likely an error which if corrected would read "Wheat, shipping $1 60@1 62½."

Shipping Intelligence

The steamer Gussie Telfair, with a small cargo of miscellaneous merchandise, reached her berth last night. She is now loading for Northern ports.

The steamship Oriflamme for San Francisco will sail at 4 P M. to-morrow with freight and passengers.

The Gussie Telfair will sail hence for Sitka and intermediate ports on Monday next, afternoon.

The bark Dunsinane has fully completed her cargo and is ready to sail. She is under charter to Messrs Corbitt & Macleay and goes to Cork for orders carrying 16,991 bushels of wheat, valued at $14,782.

The bark Mattie Macleay for Honolulu is taking on salmon at one of the fisheries down the Columbia. Her cargo is made up principally of salmon feed, wheat, oats etc.

The bark Reindeer, from Dundee consigned to Mr Wm Reid is now about due at this port. We learn that she has been chartered by Messrs Corbitt & Macleay.

The bark Heros under charter to Corbitt & Macleay is reported in the river. She comes to load wheat and will have quick dispatch her cargo [illegible] and on the wharf.

The bark Roslin Castle will probably drop down the river to morrow. She has about 920 tons on board.

The bark James Wishart with a large part of her cargo on board has gone down the river.

The ship Privateer under charter to the State Grange has arrived and will discharge ballast and load at once.

At last advices from Astoria a number of grain vessels and three coasters were reported in the river. Among them were named the Heros Nordstjern or North Star Ole Smith's Plough and Grundloren foreign and the bark Webfoot and Menshikoff, and the schooner Dreadnought.
